

The Initiative Southern Africa (INISA) and the German Africa Foundation cordially invite you to

Africa's rise in The Economist's eyes

Friday, 6th of September, 16h30

Conference room of the German Africa Foundation, Ziegelstr. 30, 10117 Berlin.

Panelists:

- Oliver August, The Economist's Africa Editor and author
- Dr. Yaw Oforu-Kusi, Social Economics Professor and Director of the Office of International Affairs, University of Education, Winneba, Ghana
- Japheth Omojuwa, Blogger and Editor of AfricanLiberty.org, Nigeria

Chair: Rene Gradwohl (INISA e.V.)

Conference language will be English. For Registration please use link below.

In the year 2000 the well-known British newspaper The Economist was still describing Africa as a lost continent. Today in 2013 that description sounds noticeable different: In their March issue the newspaper's cover read „Africa Rising". In a special report the Africa Editor Oliver August painted a picture at odds with common but outdated images and certified Africa a bright future.

How did he form his opinion? Has he fallen victim to a media hype or is there a consensus that Africa is on the rise? How diverse are the solutions in different countries?

Please register here: http://www.deutsche-afrika-stiftung.de/download/registration_Economist.pdf